

■ 16.5.2 In imperatives (mostly introduced by dann, then) eben states the lack of an alternative, often with a sense of frustration. It can also intensify a command:

Dann bleib eben zu Hause! You just stay at home, then!
 Dann halt dich eben da raus! Well, you just stop interfering!

16.6 eigentlich

■ 16.6.1 In statements eigentlich allows the speaker to change his or her mind. A following subordinate clause with aber often outlines the alternative or explains the reasons. Eigentlich can also tone down a refusal:

Eigentlich wollte ich zu Fuß gehen, aber dann habe ich doch den Bus genommen. I was actually going to walk, but then I did take the bus after all.

Sie schien eigentlich ganz nett, aber sie ist doch ziemlich reserviert. She seemed nice enough, but she's really very reserved.

Kommst du mit? Are you coming along?

Ich wollte eigentlich jetzt arbeiten. I was actually going to do some work now.

■ 16.6.2 Eigentlich makes a question friendlier and less direct. In rhetorical questions it is often reproachful:

Was hast du eigentlich studiert? Can you tell me what you studied?

Haben Sie eigentlich keinen Respekt vor alten Leuten? Don't you have any respect for elderly people?

16.7 etwa

Etwa is used mainly in questions and implied questions. The speaker hopes that something is not the case, but fears that it may be:

Störe ich Sie etwa?
 Hat er etwa gekündigt?

Sie glauben (doch) nicht etwa, dass sie daran Schuld hatte?

*I hope I'm not disturbing you?
 He hasn't handed in his notice, has he?
 You surely don't believe it was her fault?*

16.8 ja

■ 16.8.1 In statements ja often indicates that both speakers share some common knowledge (or at least assume that they do):

Du kennst ihn ja. *You know what he's like.
 Sie wohnt ja schon lange nicht mehr hier. *She hasn't been living here for a long time, as you know.

■ 16.8.2 In imperatives ja (like bloß and nur, 16.3) may express a warning, but can also convey reassurance:

Sei ja pünktlich! *You'd better be on time!
 Mach dir ja keine Sorgen! *Don't you worry!

■ 16.8.3 In exclamations ja often conveys surprise:
 Das hätte ich ja nicht gedacht! Well, I never!

Note that ja is also the affirmative particle yes and can be used in isolation or as a tag:

Du kommst doch morgen, ja? You are coming tomorrow, aren't you?

16.9 mal, nun mal

■ 16.9.1 Mal is mainly used in commands and requests, making them friendlier and more casual:

Geh (doch) mal den Nachbarn fragen.
 Könntest du mir bitte mal anfassen?

*Why don't you just go and ask the neighbour?
 You couldn't give me a hand with this, could you?*
